“ News of Jim’s death greatly saddens me. Though we lost contact with Jim years ago, we remember him as a wonderful and rare example of a very young man curious enough to devote his time and effort to a local political campaign. We not only appreciated his enthusiastic and steadfast time and effort but his unassuming input and often humorous comment. After his life took him down a separate road from ours, I often remembered him and wished him the best. My heart goes out to his family for their loss.
