“ Oh, Mrs. Grampp, I cannot possibly think of Cossitt Avenue School without thoughts of you. My first impression, was that you should be a model. My second was that you weren't as scary as people said, stern, not scary. From the very beginning you let us know that you expected nothing but out best (I am not sure that you received that from me, but I tried). My final impression, perhaps the most important, is that at 64 years old, is that I still feel such great respect for you. You, I remember vividly. When I was having trouble, you always had time for me. I don't remember what trouble, however, I remember you never hurrying me, you always made me feel important when I felt little importance anywhere else. You have left a lifelong impression on me as to what an educator should be, for that I am grateful. For me to have only spent such a short time with you, you have been with me for a lifetime.
